Electric vehicle owners can receive a full rebate of up to $5,000 for their investments if they lease electric cars under an expansion of the Battery EV Rebate. The Battery EV Rebate Program was launched by the former Labor government in 2008 and since has increased the value of rebates from $1500 in 2008 to as much as $6,000 for the most efficient electric vehicles. The latest program expands eligible vehicles to include the range of battery-only and hybrid-electric vehicles, including the Hyundai Kona EV, Nissan Leaf, and the Kia Soul EV. The program also includes additional rebates for the cost of the battery. The expansion was announced by the Victorian Treasurer, Tim Pallas, in last week's budget, along with free charging stations for the first 5,000 EVs purchased in Victoria and the inclusion of the popular Hyundai Ioniq Electric, which has a range of 161 miles on a charge and an MSRP of $35,990. Periodically over the past few years, an electric vehicle lease program has been included in the budget. This was expanded again by the current government in 2015 to include advanced technology cars, vehicles with near-zero emissions and the Tesla Model S, although the 2017 budget kept the Level 4 fuel vehicles in the category of zero emissions vehicles. Pallas has also previously stated that in the 2017-18 Victorian budget, electricity will have the same value as gas for the purpose of government rebates. The Business Case for Electric Vehicles Increasing the value of rebates for electric vehicles is part of the Victorian government's plan to reduce emissions across the whole of the Victorian economy, but the Business Case for Electric Vehicles is a separate document which details the extensive benefits of electric vehicles, the potential for massive energy
